MILITARY DOMESTIC ENGAGEMENT

focused on the

ASIA PACIFIC REGION

Domestic counter-terrorist activities, together with natural disasters, or COVID-19 pandemic are requiring increased engagement of military personnel on domestic soil. Acting alone or along with police or other emergency forces, military domestic engagement reminds us of the necessity to give due attention to the related policy and legal issues.

Aim of this event is to provide a broad legal and policy perspective on military domestic call-out legal regimes in the Asia Pacific Region. Experienced civil and military participants from Australia, Indonesia, Japan, Philippines and Thailand will discuss challenges related to civil-military cooperation from legal and policy perspectives, will share their practical experiences and concerns related to the conduct of non-military roles in peacetime environments, challenges to human rights protection and constraints on the use of armed force.
